The financial system is the backbone of an economy. A healthy financial system accelerates the process of economic growth through efficient mobilization and allocation of resources among the productive sectors of the economy. The Indian Financial System has undergone a significant transformation in terms of creation of new financial institutions, innovation of new financial instruments, diversification of the financial market, application of new technology and introduction of variety of sectoral regulating agencies to regulate the financial sector. The increasing pace of globalization has attracted global players into the domestic financial sector. The increase in the size of financial transactions and the inter linkage of the domestic financial sector with the global counterpart has introduced a number of risk elements in operational areas of the financial sector, occasionally leading to financial crisis. The fast changes in the financial world are also accompanied by changes in the monetary and fiscal policies of the government in order to ensure the protection of the consumers, investors and achievement of different socio-economic objectives of the government. In the above background, the present seminar attempts to deliberate the issues, challenges and opportunities in the Indian Financial System.

The deliberation of the seminar will be taking place in the following three technical sessions:

1. Technical Session – I
   - Economic Growth, Financial Development and Social Inequity
